An Up To Date Cannery

Manager Barnes of the Lake Bay cannery was a local visitor the latter part of last week. While here he informed the Sentinel man he expected to practically remodel the Lake Bry cannery for the season of 1911. At present the cannery is using the ordinary machinery and methods of canning. The contemplated improvements will include two rows of the latest sanitary canning machines, and the fish will be put up entirely without the use of solder. By this method fish can be put up cleaner, and the perplexing problem of Asiatic labor will be done away with. This will be the first cannery in Alaska to be equipped in this manner although there are many of them on the Columbia and in Washington.

Some people say that Al. Osborn did some lively stepping around when he had his conference with Lemieux' bull last Friday. He denies that he climbed a tree. Maybe it was only a sapling.

A Commendable Move

Marshall "Jack" Collins is certainly entitled to the thanks of the town for his street cleaning stunt, and we hope the good work will continue to go on. Grass and shubbery are all very well in their place, but that place is not blocking up the streets. For probably the first time on record, the school house can be seen from Front street, while Second street in its improved condition is a surprise to all who happen upon it. Let the good work go on.

New Dentist Arrives

A new dentist, a fine healthy little chap, weighing close to nine pounds, arrived at Dr. Emery's home bright and early Monday morning. Mother and son are doing finely, and the doctor is figuring on getting a new sign painted bearing the legend, Emery & Son, Dentists.

The local school opens its fall term next Monday, Sept. 5th.

Two Men, A Boat And A Sand Bar

Two men of Wrangell know more about the flats at the mouth of the river now than they did a week ago. We are not going to mention any names, but one is in charge of the local cable office, and the other is the Sentinel's editor.

They were headed for home last Sunday evening after a day pleasantly spent among the islands at the river's mouth. The engine in the boat was chug-chugging along finely, when suddenly, without a moment of warning, it stopped. Just about this time a comber struck Capt. Mack in the countenance, and getting rid of a mouthful of salt water he wanted to know "W-h-a-t-'s t-h-e m-a-t-t-e-r-?" and the launch losing headway, dropped into the trough of the waves. Up and down and 'round about the boat swung while the engineer-editor hunted for the trouble, and located it at last—a broken wire from the coil to the timer. This of course took time, and wind and tide carried the two troubled mariners into the mouth of the big slough between Brown's and Farm island. Off came the retaining nut from the spark coil, a little bit of of round brass about as big as the end of your little finger, and just as it was put on the seat, while the wire was scraped to make a good contact, a sudden roll of the boat sent it spinning along under the engine, clear out of sight. Another half hour or so was spent looking for the pesky thing, and all the time wind and tide were pushing them steadily along up the slough. At last it was found, the wires were connected, a turn given to the engine wheel, and off she started. Then the momentous question of which way to head came up. Capt. Mack was of the opinion that up the slough and into the main river would be the easiest way home, so the bow was turned up-stream and away we went. Suddenly when we thought that there was water to burn if necessary under the boat, she grounded, and we made the discovery that the tide was falling and we stood no more show than a jack rabbit to get home, so we made the boat secure for the night and waded ashore, to look for Al. Spader's camp. Mack claimed that he could pilot us to the place, and notwithstanding the fact that we had lost faith in his ability to do much else in the piloting line except find sand bars, we agreed to follow his lead and across the island we went, he asserting that the house was just around the corner. It was, but the trouble was that there were half-a-dozen other corners before we came to the right one, and it was not until we had routed out "Bill" Dillman and gotten the straight tip from him that we finally arrived at Al. Osborn's cabin and found Al. Spader. Of course we wouldn't for a farm tell of all the stunts Mack went through getting there, that is for him to say.

It would take more room than all the Sentinel contains to tell of the royal way in which Al. Spader treated us, the shipwrecked sailors—how he filled us up on muligan and hot coffee, got out of his comfortable bed and slept on the floor that we might rest the more easy, and how the next day he entertained and fed us while the wind boomed down the river and the rain beat down, showing him in every way to be a prince of good fellows. That night the tide failed to come in far enough to float us off, so we made up our minds to wait. During the interval the good folk of Wrangell, when we failed to arrive as expected, began to fear that accident had overtaken us, and at had started Pete Jensen and his gasboat out on a hunt for us and at dusk he made the find. His boat was miles away across the flats, and through the rising tide we waded to it, taking baths en route in the little blind sloughs, but climbed on board at last, and the writer hereof knows that one member at least of the party was mighty glad to get there, and so ended the trip of the cable man and the editor.

Mrs. Pucey left on the Dolphin for Juneau where she will attend the annual conference of government teachers. She will return in time to open up the native school here, Sept. 12. Mrs. Pucey spent her vacation at her old home in Iowa.

A new baby arrived at the Case resident Tuesday morning, and that's going some for a man of Tom's age.

LET'S GET BUSY

The tourist season of 1910 is a thing of the past, whether or not it came up to expectations is beside the question, the point is that we as a town—a unit—should get together to prepare for the years to come.

At the last session of the town council, Donald Sinclair made the suggestion that we should make the town more attractive to the transient, be he tourist or otherwise. In speaking along this line he made the suggestion that the town could secure the three fine totem poles now at "Oldtown," which are probably among the oldest perfect specimens in existence, and erect them in the grassy plots on Front street, in the neighborhood of the Old Pioneer and the Patenaude buildings, with suitable inscriptions, stating their age, to whom they belonged, and the story they represented.

It seems to this paper that the idea is one well worth putting into effect. The stay of the greater number of the steamers is so short that the travelers have but a few moments in which to view the items of interest we may have to offer for their consideration, and can take away with them but a vague idea of the things they may have seen here.

The greater number of the visitors come to Alaska only to see our curiosities. This being the case it were a good idea for Wrangell to get the best she may have in this line to the front so that the stranger who may happen to be within our gates can see them. On this account we believe that the suggestion that we move the totem poles up from their old resting place where they are of no use to anybody and are never seen by the traveller to a point where all may see them, is a good one, and it is to be hoped that the plan may be pushed to a successful consummation.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR

Last Saturday afternoon the town of Douglas and, incidentally, the News office, were honored by a visit from a distinguished personage. Now we warrant that you are guessing some down East congressman or, perhaps, a member of the cabinet. But it was none of these. It was Tommy Lyons. Beg your pardon. We should have said Judge Lyons. He is a judge alright, and, we are informed, has proved a rattling good one. So much so that the people of the Tanana, to whom he appeared in almost the light of a carpetbagger, wanted to keep him for all time. But everybody in Southeastern Alaska feels a sort of a personal interest in Tommy Lyons, because he is not a carpetbagger to us. He is one of our products and we are proud of him and of the record he has made, and we hope he will never do anything that will cause us to think less of him.

"We thought for a time said the News man, "that they would keep you at Fairbanks."

"Oh, no," said the judge, "I wanted to come home."

He looks a little thin and tired, he worked hard and the first term on the bench is a hard one for any judge.—Douglas Island News.

Shipping Katalla Oil

Several tanks of petroleum from the newly discovered oil fields near Katalla were taken to the Sound recently on the steamer A. G. Lindsay. The Standard Oil company has had agents in the district, and they have secured this oil for analysis. In case the oil proves up to expectations the Standard Oil company will contract with the property holders for all their output. They will not, however, make any attempt to buy the oil lands themselves.

Notice of Hearing in Final Account

In the United States Commissioner's Court, Wrangell Precinct, First Division, District of Alaska.

IN PROBATE

In the matter of the Estate of W. F. Smith, deceased.

Jacob Babler, Administrator of the above named estate, this day filed his final account as such administrator and asked to have a day set for final hearing of the same.

The same will be heard on the 10th day of October, 1910, at the hour of 10 o'clock, a. m., at the courtroom of said court, in said town and precinct of Wrangell.

All persons interested in said estate are notified then and there to appear and show cause, if any they have, why said account should not be finally approved, and said administrator be finally discharged.

Made and entered this 5th day of August, A. D. 1910.

Webster's NEW INTERNATIONAL Dictionary, (G. & C. Merriam Co., Springfield, Mass.) surpasses the old International as much as that book exceeded its predecessor. On the old foundation a new superstructure has been built. The reconstruction has been carried on through many years by a large force of trained workers, under the supervision of Dr. W. T. Harris, former United States Commissioner of Education, and reinforced by many eminent specialists. The definitions have been rearranged and amplified. The number of terms defined has been more than doubled. The etymology, synonyms, pronunciation, have received unsparing scholarly labor. The language of English literature for over seven centuries, the terminology of the arts and sciences, and the every-day speech of street, shop, and household, are presented with fullness and clearness. In size of vocabulary, in richness of general information, and in convenience of consultation, the book sets a new mark in lexicography.

Two Skagway men became engaged in a scuffle. One went to the hospital with a broken leg, the other was fined $120 by the U. S. commissioner.

The first shipment of Iditarod gold to the Seattle assay office amounted to $53,826. The season's output amounts to not more than $60,000.

Two acetylene lights of the "blinker" variety, the first light-house of any kind in or around Prince William Sound, are now being installed by the government. One is on Middle rock in Valdez narrows, and the other is on the point of Busby Island where the Saratoga was wrecked.

News comes from Nome of the safe arrival there of the schooner Bender Bros. She sailed north in June for the Kuskokwim. She had several school teachers on board bound for the government schools at isolated points on Bering sea. She will stop at Kanaknak, Little Diomed, Point Hope and Point Barrow.

Accident At Loring

Last Tuesday morning a sad accident occurred at Loring which resulted in the death of P. Donovan and the serious injury of D. A. Jones, two workmen employed in repairing the dock for the Alaska Packers Association.

The injured man was immediately brought to Ketchikan by Manager Heckman and placed in the hospital where he is recovering rapidly. Donovan was buried at Loring as it was impossible to locate any of his relatives to get instructions regarding the disposition of the body.

The manner of the accident was testified by a half dozen witnesses who reported it as follows.

"There was one pile which was raised and wedged under the sills but not spiked to the same but braced. In raising another pile into place the head of it became jammed and in slewing around to clear, it struck the first pile and the brace carried away. The pile came down with a run and caught the man under it. Donovan was struck all along the side and in the breast and in the breast and hip and so far as we know, instantly killed."—Ketchikan Miner.

Passenger Rates

With the end of the present Alaska excursion season close at hand, steamship officials are speculating as to how long present rates to southeastern Alaska will be in effect, and what bearing the action of the Humboldt Steamship company in announcing a continuation of the $50 rate to Skagway until early in October, will have on the policy of other line. "Regardless of what others may do," said Manager Max Kalish, of the Humboldt Steamship company, "we shall maintain our $50 rate to Skagway until late in September or early in October. Announcement of rate cutting by some of the other lines would not surprise me." — Douglas News.
